Our theme of rules from last week has been expanded on this week with allusions to light and darkness, and the choices we make between light and darkness.

I wonder why the people in the desert chose to speak against God and Moses? I wonder why we choose to do wrong when we know what is right? I wonder why Nicodemus chose to visit Jesus in the night?

I wonder what these stories teach you about the kingdom of God?

When the city was captured and occupied by Babylon Jeremiah continued to speak God's word to the people. In the midst of the chaos Jeremiah spoke of a new covenant of love and a relationship between all the people and their God. I wonder how you have watched God's covenant change throughout these weeks of Lent? I wonder how you have seen God's covenant stay consistent throughout all of these days? I wonder what Jesus is speaking of when he talks about light and darkness to his followers? I wonder how we can best be "children of light"?

*Reflections: I wonder what the shepherds were feeling as the sky exploded with the voices of angels singing?
What are the qualities of a good shepherd? How do we experience these qualities in our life with God?
I wonder what the shepherds told their grandchildren about how the events of this night impacted their lives?
How have you experienced joy this week?*
